What's It Take to Do Something That Has Never Been Done Before?

September 9, 2021 – Tampa, FL - Do you know what it takes to do something that has never been done before and do you want to do it? If asked, most might say that they do want to do something that has never been done before. However, most people don't really want to work all the hours it takes, even if they were to get paid overtime!

In the beginning, one is rarely compensated when they set out to do something never done before.

Why do people continue doing what they have always done? For just that reason - they know what to expect - they work 40 hours, and they get paid for working those 40 hours. They work Monday-Friday, they do not have to work weekends, they take their vacation time off, and get paid for personal days and sick days, etc.

It takes stepping outside of the box to accomplish something that has never been done before – something different must be done.

You may need to learn a new skill to create this new thing that has never been done before. Would you spend the next five years educating yourself before or after work to acquire this new type of expertise? Would you quit your job and work 12 hours per day, six days per week to earn a certification and gain knowledge in half the time? You could accomplish learning something needed to bring this idea to life in just 2 1/2 years versus 5 years. What if you learned several new areas of expertise were needed to do something that has never been done before? Would you take two or three specific educational courses and spend the next 7 1/2 years working six days per week, 12 hours per day?

What if there was an easier way to do it? Would you want to know about it?

If yes, read on:

- Write down your ideas. Review your ideas many times. Make tweaks to gain clarity.
- Create a step-by-step, master plan, a blueprint. Consider creating a how-to manual.
- Start with the end in mind and write your plan backwards. You must know what you want to accomplish, then create the sequence needed to achieve your goals.

If you find new or additional areas of expertise are needed to implement your idea, consider hiring expert before committing the next five years to acquiring that area of expertise yourself. You may need to interview several people before finding the right person for your project.

Do your due diligence and check his/her education, experience, level of expertise, then contact them directly to see if they are a good candidate for your project.

Focus on if the expert has the education, experience, and expertise you need to move your project forward. A benefit of hiring an expert is they often have contacts that might be beneficial to the success of your plan. They might have worked on previous projects that would complement your plan and will enable you to bring your idea to the marketplace faster and with ease.

If you would like to discuss your idea with someone who loves to create things that have never been done before, consider contacting me. Masterminding is my favorite sport!
