

PART 3 OF 8

THINK YOU KNOW IRAN?

DOES SHARI'A ENCOURAGE HUMAN TRAFFIC?

MOSQUES AND HUMAN TRAFFIC

Excerpts from the book, First Comes the Mosque by George H. Hassanzadeh

An Article under Warning..., Warning...the cry of Iranians to the free world says, "... Some unknown people possibly working for the government, cunningly mix in the crowd targeting young teenage girls and under the pretext of First Aids help forcefully inject them with some unmarked drug, and are then taken to an unspecified place and their fate becomes unknown...."

As a part of an overall scheme of turning Iran into another Arab state, the government of mullahs is seriously involved in the kidnapping and human trafficking. The idea, along with other major changes in cultural, educational, and sovereignty, is changing the bloodline of Persian into Arab to complete their mission of wiping out any indication of Persian/Iranian social order and quickly turning it into another Arab state. Tragically, the world is unresponsive to the government of the Arab mullah's crime of human trafficking, forcing Iranians into slavery, rob Iranians of their freedom, dignity, and safety, and undermines the rule of law.

Some Iranians state that a large number of these young girls are sold to Arabs for handsome reward but also as part of changing Persian blood since Arabs believe in paternity line, not maternity. Some Iranians claim that several young Iranian girls have been seen working as prostitute and slaves in several Arab states around the Persian Gulf.

The agents of religious leaders are licensed to stop, detain, and drugged teenage girls, taken them to an unknown place with frequent destination the Persian Gulf Emirates to be auctioned off.

In a chaotic situation, Syrian and Palestinian so-called security forces target young Iranian women, and kidnap, beat, torture them in front of hundreds of fearful bystanders in bright daylight, and take them to an unknown whereabouts.

Out of respect for blood of martyred, we proudly sleep with Arab Iraqi men¹.

Another big racket is mullah's highly organized white slavery. Promoters send their male-female operators in cities and villages to recruit young girls to be trained as hosts', cashiers in the Arab rich Persian Gulf Emirates. Once they arrive there, they are whisked off to an unknown location where God knows their fate. Some stranded and forced into prostitution. A young girl, who managed to escape, told an Iranian taxi driver, "I woke up in a dungeon-looking place I do not know where in the world I was." "I could hear men talking in Arabic." "I heard a woman speak a few words, what it sounded like Farsi." "For the first two days I was terrified and I was crying." "Two Arab men came in and took me outside and pushed me into the backseat of a car and while one was driving, the other one slaps my face, and savagely pushed his two fingers into my vaginal and my rectum, causing excruciating pain." "He was amused, and saying something to the driver in Arabic." "I was bleeding." "From that moment on, I knew my body no longer belongs to me." The girls are afraid to complain due to harsh intimidation. Fair skin, fair-haired Iranian girls are much desired.

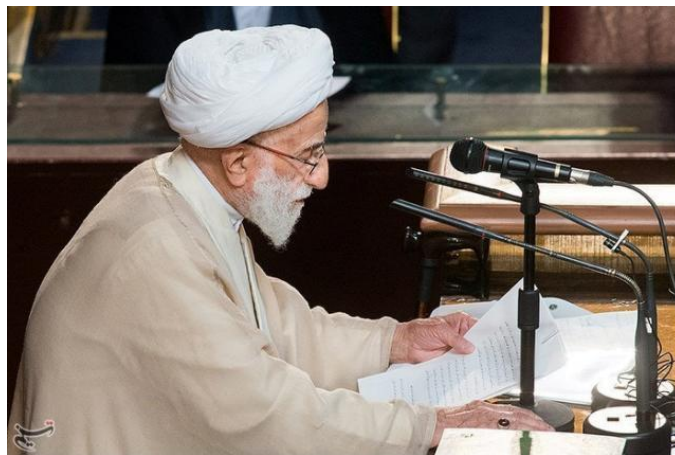

In its annual report on human trafficking by 'United States Institute of Peace' June 15, 2013, under US Report Human Trafficking Rises in Iran, the State Department called Iran a "presumed source, transit, and destination country for men, women, and children subjected to sex trafficking and forced labor." The number of teenage girls in prostitution has reportedly risen significantly in Tehran between 35,000 and 50,000.

The report continued, the Islamic Republic has earned the lowest possible ranking on handling human trafficking every year since 2006. The following is an excerpt from the 2013 Trafficking in Persons Report.

NGO reports indicate criminal organizations, sometimes politically connected, play a significant role in human trafficking in Iran. Unconfirmed reports indicate that some religious leaders and immigration officials are involved in human trafficking.

The Government of Iran does not comply with the minimum standards for the elimination of trafficking and is not making significant efforts to do so. The government did not share information on its anti-trafficking efforts with the international community during the reporting period; this impedes the collection of information on the country's human trafficking problem and the government's efforts to curb it. Publicly available information from NGOs, the press, international organizations, and other governments indicate that the Iranian government is not taking sufficient steps to address its extensive trafficking challenges.

Prevention There were no reports of efforts by the Government of Iran to prevent trafficking during the past year, such as campaigns to raise public awareness of trafficking, to reduce demand for commercial sex acts, or to reduce demand for child sex tourism by Iranians traveling abroad. There was no apparent improvement in the transparency of the government's reporting on its own anti-trafficking policies or activities and no apparent efforts to forge partnerships with international organizations or NGOs in addressing human trafficking problems. Iran is not a party to the 2000 UN TIP Protocol.

In his speech, Iran's hardliner Ayatollah Mohammad Taghi Mesbah Yazdi complained, that the pace of bloodline Change from Iranian to Arab and the nation to Arab states is not going fast enough, he declared, "Let us finish up the job."

While the world is oblivious to Iran's Arab ultimate goal, clergy leaders boldly and frequently broadcast statements such as the one Yazdi regularly makes. He has said, "The time has come to rid of this tired old inferior blood, and replace it with world-recognized superior Arab blood as Prophet Mohammad desired." He also added, "We must be mindful of not hiring indigenous Iranians to any government posts."

Author and historian Hassan Rahnavardi said ², "It is interesting that [these same] mullahs seek an audience with the Royal family to express their loyalty to their nation and convey the sentiments of 'spiritual society' as loyal and proud Iranians, and as always [are] beg for more endowments [from the government]."

OFFICE TO MONITOR AND COMBAT TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS

2016 Trafficking in Persons Report

Iran is a source, transit, and destination country for men, women, and children subjected to sex trafficking and forced labor. Accurate information on human trafficking in Iran is difficult to obtain. Organized groups reportedly subject Iranian women, boys, and girls to sex trafficking in Iran and in Afghanistan, the Iraqi Kurdistan Region, Pakistan, United Arab Emirates, and Europe. Iranian girls between the ages of 13 and 17 are targeted by traffickers for sale abroad; younger girls may be forced into domestic service until their traffickers consider them old enough to be subjected to child sex trafficking. An increase in the transport of girls from and through Iran en route to the other Gulf States for sexual exploitation has been reported from 2009-2015; during the reporting period, Iranian trafficking networks subjected Iranian girls to sex trafficking in brothels in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. The media reported Kurdistan Regional Government officials were among the clients of these brothels. In Tehran, Tabriz, and Astrakhan, the number of teenage girls exploited in sex trafficking continues to increase. Organized criminal groups kidnap or purchase and force Iranian and immigrant children to work as beggars and street vendors in cities, including Tehran. These children, who may be as young as 3, are coerced through physical and sexual abuse and drug addiction; reportedly many are purchased for as little as $150.
